But when his teacher starts the "Say Yes to No" club, he learns that "no" isn't so bad after all. (Ages 3 and up) Buy I Just Don't Like the Sound of NO! Courtesy of Barnes & Noble Read this colorful book to your preschooler to illustrate the importance of listening during school. He might even pay attention better at home, too. (Ages 3 and up) Courtesy of Barnes & Noble Benny, an incorrigible little pig, falls into a mud hole after disregarding his mother's instructions. This out-of-print story told with spare text and expressive pictures will have your kids giggling while it teaches them the consequences of not listening. (Ages 3 and up) Courtesy of Harper Collins Publishers Lilly can't wait till sharing time to show the class her shiny new purple purse, and her favorite teacher, Mr. Slinger, is forced to take it away. She decides to get revenge, but then realizes the error of her ways and works hard to regain his favor. (Ages 4 and up) Buy Lilly's Purple Plastic Purse Courtesy of Amazon.com Bear needs help, but none of the animals in his village will listen long enough to hear what his problem is before offering solutions. Little kids will relate to his frustration at not being heard, and you can use it to explain how it makes you feel when they don't listen. (Ages 4 and up) Buy "I Have a Little Problem," Said the Bear Courtesy of Barnes & Noble The first book in this award-winning series chronicles the tale of a little rabbit that gets into all kinds of trouble for failing to focus on his teacher and friends. In the end, Howard learns that life is much happier when he becomes a good listener. (Ages 4 and up) Buy Howard B. Wigglebottom Learns to Listen Courtesy of Barron's Educational Series Kids can easily get caught up in the moment and forget to pay attention. This book takes them step by step through the reasons why listening at all times is essential. (Ages 4 and up) Courtesy of Amazon.com Does your child constantly interrupt others? This story told through the eyes of Louis, a little boy whose words wiggle and jiggle until they explode right out of his mouth, will teach her the value of respecting others and waiting for her turn to speak. (Ages 4 and up) Buy My Mouth is a Volcano! Courtesy of Barnes & Noble Buddy has big, beautiful bunny ears but can't seem to use them to listen. Silliness ensues as Buddy constantly misunderstands his parents' requests until he finally learns to tune in, just in time. (Ages 5 and up) Thanks for your feedback! Minimum purchase value INR 5000 See All The other day I looked at my beautiful six-year-old daughter carefully tending to her baby doll and had a somewhat morbid thought: What would happen if I was no longer here to mother her? This might be a little PTSD from the quarantined times we're currently walking through, or it might be a relatable feeling for a lot of mothers. We all want to live full and complete lives with our children. We all want to live long enough to know they'll be okay. So I started to jot down a few things I'd want my daughter to always remember in my absence, but quickly I realized this list wasn't just for a six-year-old; it was for me too. This world is so busy it's easy to lose track of the beauty. It becomes natural to coast by instead of truly connecting. But if we slow down long enough to look, to preserve the moments and turn them into memories, it becomes very clear what really matters. It's not products or posts. It's not money or materials. It's this. Here's a few secrets about our wonderful world I hope all women—growing and grown—hold close. Dear daughter, Not everyone will like you. Don't try to convince them to. Those who want to see your worth will. Don't believe lies about your body. Maybe your wide hips came from your mother. Maybe your curly hair reflects your wild spirit. Soft, saggy skin means a life well lived. It means you've been lucky enough to watch your grandkids grow. Marry someone who thinks you look beautiful in a ball gown. Marry someone who thinks you look beautiful in a ball cap. Don't settle for someone who tells you love has terms and conditions. Become a mother, if you want. Become a businesswoman, if you want. Become both, if you choose. Set boundaries with those you love and especially those you don't. Remember "no" is a complete sentence. You don't ever have to explain why something doesn't work for you. Learn how to speak new languages. Accept everyone, always. Eat your way through this world. Never tell your children not to cry. Never tell your children, "I just want you to be happy." Show them what it's like to be emotional because that means they're alive. Take care of yourself first. This is non-negotiable. Motherhood might try to steal your identity. Take a trip to Tahiti. Take a trip to Target. Just make sure to carve out space for your truest self to still exist. Some people are kind. Some people are cruel. Some people are kind. We have an obligation to love everyone, but some people we must love from a safe distance. Make your bed and move your body every day. Light the good candles. Eat organic, eat a Big Mac. Read a book with actual pages. And remember, the best thing you can do is live your life out loud. Never hide who you are. What makes you different, makes you beautiful. For the system to be more effective, all the activities should be given equal importance. The ineffectiveness of any one of these will affect the system inexplicably. But the first two are, to a greater extent, emphasized in the educational system. Evaluation, as such, is not cared enough not only in language education but in other studies also. In fact, the process and product are very much important as far as evaluation is concerned. Apart from these two factors, namely, process and product, the ultimate objective of language education is to scientifically and systematically evaluate the competence and performance of the learners. The National Testing Service-India established in the Central Institute of Indian Languages to cater to the successful pedagogical needs of scientific and systematic teaching, learning and evaluation in different levels of language education has three primary objectives, namely, (i) creation of nationwide consensus and awareness about concrete methods and purposes of evaluation, (ii) production of basic reference materials and (iii) development of training human resources in this area. The NTS-India has been conducting orientation programmes for the teachers for successful implementation of the stimulating research findings on the concept based continuum of graded syllabi containing separate dimensions for language and literature. The General Frame of Reference was first prepared in English by the Centre for Testing and Evaluation of the institute to assess the level of mastery in language and literature and the consequential growth of learner's personality. NTS-I has brought out two books one each for language & literature explaining the terms found in the GFR so as to facilitate the classroom teachers to understand these concepts and write appropriate items to assess the different components of language & literature. In continuation of the efforts made in this direction, NTS-1 now bringing out a book on "Teaching and Evaluation of Tamil Epics". Epics, being a major component of the Tamil textbooks across the curriculum, a detailed discussion on the different aspects of this literary genreanalyzing the different methods of teaching & evaluating epics will be of great help to the classroom teachers as well as the test developers & item writers. The present volume contains 25 papers written by experienced teachers and young scholars as well, each one taking up the different aspects of Tamil epics. This is the anthology of the papers presented in the seminar conference held at Thiruvalluvar University, Vellore between 06/03/2014 and 07/03/2014. Hope this material fulfills the requirements of the stakeholders in the field of teaching, learning & evaluating Tamil. Dr. M. Balakumar, officer In charge, NTS-1 and his team members deserve high appreciation for taking up this task of focusing on a particular literary genre and discussing meticulously the different issues involved in teaching and evaluating of epics. I wish and hope Dr. M. Balakumar and his team brings out more and more such volumes to help those involved in teaching and evaluating Indian languages. **Contents and Sample Pages**
